The small print however says only that it was postmarked Wigston in 1906. Update: It seems likely that the location for the photograph was the gymnasium at the Glen Parva barracks, often referred to as South Wigston at the time.

35-458 Glen Parva Barracks.JPG	fb	35-458 Glen Parva Barracks GLEN PARVA BARRACKS The barracks opened under the name of Wigston Barracks in 1881. Their creation took place as part of the Cardwell Reforms which encouraged the localisation of British military forces. The barracks became the depot for the two battalions of the 17th (Leicestershire) Regiment of Foot as well as the 45th (Nottinghamshire) Regiment of Foot. Following the Childers Reforms, the barracks became the depot of the Royal Leicestershire Regiment in 1881 Tens of thousands of recruits and conscripts were trained there for deployment during the First World War. The barracks went on to become the regional centre for infantry training as the Forester Brigade Depot in 1960. They were closed in the late 1960 and most of the buildings were sold. Although Glen Parva Young Offenders Institution now occupies much of the site, a unit of the Royal Army Pay Corps remained there until 1997.
